Stansfield Turner, Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Turner:

I am an assistant professor of international relations at St. John's University (Minnesota).

For the last two years I have been in Germany writing books on the 1961 Berlin Wall crisis and normalization of relations between the United States and China.

In the past I have invited representatives of the State Department to come to St. John's to address students in my courses about the policy-making implications of some of the topics they are studying. This has proved very successful, largely because State has sent knowledgeable young desk officers who can relate to students.

St. John's University usually shared these people with other neighboring colleges and universities and they have helped with travel, room and board.

Should your agency be interested in sending us a specialist/analyst for a two or three day period, he or she would be most welcome. I would suggest, however, two people as possibilities: Bruce C. Clark, Jr., with whose father I have worked closely in the past on my own research regarding Berlin, and

STATINTL

Please let us know if you would be able to send us one of these people, should they be willing to come. If for some reason one of these persons cannot make the trip we would like to have a dynamic young individual with scholarly concerns.

Sincerely,

Mace

P.S. Your secretary may reach me by telephone at (612) 363-2724 to discuss possible dates for this semester. The best time for me to talk about this matter would be after classes (i.e. between 1600 and 1800 hours Monday through Friday.)
